Burt-Watts Helps Build a New Game in Town

AUSTIN, TX, December 1 — Leading Central Texas general contracting firm, Burt-Watts Inc., recently completed a new headquarters space for the cutting-edge, Austin-based gaming company, Vigil Games. The company tapped Burt-Watts to build their new 33,160-square-foot headquarters, located at Four Points Center, 11305 Four Points Drive in Austin, Texas.

The team that managed the project includes:

- John Knowles, AIA, director of interiors, Davis RKP Architects
- Bill Lindstrom, construction manager, Thomas Properties Group, Inc.
- Jason Petty, systems engineer, Vigil Games
- Jim Donaldson, vice president and senior project manager, UGL Equis

“We at Burt-Watts have been privileged to work with a number of Austin’s most innovative companies,” said Tommy Burt, president and co-founder, Burt-Watts. “Vigil Games certainly fits that category and we were happy to help build a space that allows for future growth and reflects the company’s unique culture.”

An internal studio for top interactive entertainment publisher and developer, THQ Inc., Vigil Games is truly a ground-breaking gaming company. By combining talented comic artists with a host of experienced designers, programmers and managers, Vigil Games has been able to produce some truly innovative titles for today’s leading video game platforms.

Vigil Games’ new space features include sculpted reclaimed wood walls, eclectic European laminates and decorative glass interspersed throughout. The newly redesigned space will not only allow them to grow, but also better fit their operations. The project is slated for completion on 12 December.
